Booking the Pilot Morning

Three calls, then a date - 14 October 2026

Booking the pilot morning - a sheet for the three calls

For: Erin, 14 October 2026. Three calls, then a date. Why this exists: the status document's own next step. "The review body is closed. The next real step is not more review - it is one real Origin morning." What the morning is: one real Origin Session 1, "The Map of Me" and the 100 Dreams. Two to four real teenagers. One morning. Salus and Jake in the room as the safety pair. This is the binding real-learner walk, run as the pilot.

Before you dial: the honest gate count

The pilot has eight named preconditions, not none. Six are already in hand. Two are open, and today's calls close most of one of them.

#	Gate	State
1	Referral pathway live: named clinician, same-week warm handoff	OPEN. Call 1
2	Consent given against the one-page Family note	OPEN. The note does not exist. One page of writing, and the only thing here that is not a phone call
3	A crisis-concurrency answer for that morning: one named reachable adult, on paper	OPEN. Call 2 settles it
4	A runnable somatic settle, way-down and exit ramp	In hand. `launch-pad-somatic-floor-grammar-v0.1.md`
5	The closing-practice draft in hand	In hand. `launch-pad-closing-practice-v0.1.md`
6	"The Curious No" in the guide's hand	In the merged design. This is the thing the pilot exists to test
7	External-accountability node named	Salus and Jake, confirmed at Call 2
8	The multi-modal-capture sentence ready to say aloud	Below, verbatim

Gate 2 is the real one. Consent that hides its limits is not consent, and the Family note is what carries the limits. It does not need to be the finished Family note the programme will eventually publish. It needs to be one honest page for this one morning.

Call 1 - the clinician

The one call that closes three separate owed items. Ask for all three; they are the same conversation.

1. Will you be the named warm-referral therapist? Same-week handoff, a real name and a current number. This is the single blank in an otherwise complete crisis roster, and it has been the blank for months.
2. The Table question. A shared meal runs every guide day. Presence, never consumption, and nobody watches anybody's plate. For a learner in active eating-disorder recovery, can this room hold that, and what would you need us to do differently? Ask also: is being at the Table refusable on a hard day without it reading as not belonging?
3. Who else should we point families to when the honest answer is that this room cannot hold what their learner needs? Real names and numbers. Special education advocates, programmes with aide support, the state parent training centre. Six names is enough.

Call 2 - Salus and Jake

1. Confirm the date once you have one, and confirm both are in the room for the whole morning.
2. Name the reachable adult for crisis concurrency that morning, on paper, in case something happens while you are with a learner. One name, one number.
3. Say the watch out loud, so they know what they are for. Not whether the morning goes well. Five things: does the guide meet the first no or manage it. Does the settle land in a real body. Could either of you actually stop me mid-morning. Could these learners freely decline. Could every learner have said yes in the first place.
4. The honest frame, from Naomi: this pilot cannot validate the sovereignty claim, because the first learners are the founder's child and the community's children, and they structurally cannot freely decline. So watch, do not conclude.

Call 3 - the families

Two to four teenagers. No pitch and no persuasion.

- What the morning is, plainly, and that it is one morning rather than a commitment.
- That two other adults will be in the room and why.
- That their learner may decline any part of it, including all of it, and nothing changes.
- That nothing from the morning is photographed, written up or posted. Not now, not later.
- Consent is given against the one-page note, not against this phone call.

Then: the date

Within about three weeks. Put it in the calendar before the calls go cold.

The sentence to have ready on the day

> "The Log is captured however you hold it. Written, spoken, drawn, dictated, or told to someone who writes it down for you. No form is the lesser Log."

What the morning is not

Not a promotion event. No photographs, no write-up, no post, not now and not afterwards. It is item 8 on the Deliberately NOT Shown wall. It is a mirror for the guide, not a launch.

The pilot is the founder's own capacity to be told no by a child who adores her. That is the whole experiment.

"We evoke - we never extract."
